

WASHINGTON POST
13 September 1986

OBITUARIES

PHILIP BRIGGS JR.,

57, a former analyst with the Central Intelligence Agency who became a real estate broker, died of congestive heart failure Sept. 11 at Loudoun Memorial Hospital in Leesburg, Va.

Mr. Briggs, a resident of Leesburg, was born in Washington and graduated from the Maret School. He earned a bachelor's degree at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

He joined the CIA in 1947 and left the agency in 1962 to become a real estate broker in Northern Virginia. He retired for health reasons in 1974.

Mr. Briggs was a member of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers and the Washington Meeting House of the Society of Friends.

Survivors include his wife, Sally Thorpe Briggs of Arlington; one son, James P. III, of Leesburg; one daughter, Susan Briggs of Alexandria; his mother, Anna C. Briggs of Leesburg, and one sister, Virginia Dungan of Walton, N.Y.